Against Trafficking in Women

SAVE THE DATE

On December 2, 2009, CATW will present a program at NYU titled "A Conversation Among Men About Sex Trafficking" in commemoration of the UN's International Day for the Abolition of Slavery. Panelists include some of the anti-trafficking movement's most passionate speakers, such as the author/activists Victor Malarek (The Johns) and Aaron Cohen (Slave Hunter); Judge Fernando Camacho, Presiding Justice, Queens Integrated Domestic Violence Court and the poet Jonathan Walton.

For 21 years, CATW has fought extensively to end male violence against women and girls and to achieve gender equality. CATW has especially worked to challenge the demand for commercial sex that promotes sex trafficking. This panel is designed to explore the political role men must play to end violence against women and girls, especially sex trafficking. Please join us for this politically unique and unprecedented program.
